Bagatelle Boutique

South Kensington's esteemed Bagatelle boulangerie has reopened after more than a year of enforced closure- a refurbishment prompted by a London red bus entering the premises in May 2002. The owners have taken the opportunity to give the store a new look a la Française, and a cheery "Bonjour" greets customers who enter. Although the décor is elegant, Bagatelle does swift lunch trade with local workers popping in for sandwiches and drinks. Fine breads and pâtisserie are the mainstays, but there are also prepared take-home dishes such as stuffed tomatoes, fresh Toulouse sausages, cheeses from Normandy-based Isigny Sainte-Mère, and foie gras from Rougié in Sarlat. The fruity French jams are especially good.
